

Network Attached Storage System with Data Storage Device Hot Swap Capability

Abstract of Disclosure

The present invention is directed to a network attached storage system for storing data that provides the ability to "hot swap" a data storage device associated with the system while substantially reducing, during removal of the data storage device, the possibility that data being transferred between the data storage device and the exterior environment is lost or corrupted and/or damage to the data storage device.

TOP SECRET

Figures

09682634-1001-4292960